Description of the good example

The handbook was published by International Sports and Culture Association (ISCA) in collaboration with the Sport Action Network of Europe (SANTE) in 2009. The handbook supports the promotion of health enhancing physical activity (HEPA) within the framework of the European Commission's preparatory actions on sport. SANTE is an ambitious effort of 17 partners across Europe, representing sport organisations, universities, businesses and local governments to address and act upon the contemporary challenge of improving European health levels.

Target - Who can best use this example or document?

Policymakers, Sport organisations, business and local government, health organisers, sport organisations, national and local sport organisations.

Highlights and outcomes

Why could it be useful for your organisation and advocacy?

The handbook is innovative tool that fosters improved cross-sectoral collaboration for future policy development and implementation across Europe. It is a good example of knowledge-sharing, for promoting HEPA, and building capacity to engage national and local sport organisations around Europe. It promotes cooperation between sport organisations and businesses, schools, local governments, health organisations and others.

Learning points - What can we learn from it?

SANTE has a special focus on supporting and promoting cross sector innovative partnerships to foster learning across Europe's borders and inform future actions within health enhancing physical activity (HEPA). A broader cooperation and sharing between the stakeholders on all levels will be beneficial to effectively reach and activate more European citizens in PA.
